

As a resident of Indiana I am very happy with the current law concerning telephone solicitation. Please consider that as a consumer, I am being marketed constantly: mailings in my bank statement, loan payment, when I make a deposit, read the paper or listen to the radio. That should be enough to "reach" me. With our busy lives our home is our last refuge to "tune" out of the mass marketing and tune into our families, it is my right to not have anyone solicit me, if I so choose. Please leave Indiana's law as it is.

Thanks for your time.

Sincerely,

Becky Brown
